

Weimar Republic the feminist movement was one of the most powerful in Europe. German women had a high degree of legal and actual equality with men. But when the Nazis came to power they offset the achievements of German women through a purposeful struggle against feminism as an ideology and practice.

In conclusion it should be emphasized that the Soviet government was not opposed to make equal rights between man and woman, because it was in their own interests to improve the economy and increase new labor. The government was interested in involving women in politics in order to strengthen the Soviet ideology and consolidate the same ideology in their children.

USING OF COMPUTER MODELING IN THE STUDY OF HISTORY

Modeling is a method that is widely used on both levels, empirical and theoretical. Using of such methods in studying of the different periods of history can help to understand a lot of aspects of history.

The objective of my investigation is to analyze modeling as a method of historical research.

Computer modeling makes it possible to:

1. Expand the circle of research objects - it becomes possible to study non-repeating phenomena, phenomena of the past and future, objects that are not reproduced in real conditions.
2. To study the phenomena and processes in the dynamics of their deployment.
3. Manage time (speed up, slow down, etc.).
4. Make repeated tests of the model, each time returning it to its original state.
5. Conduct experiments without risk of negative consequences for human health or the environment.
6. Visualize objects of any nature, including abstract ones.
7. Make repeated tests of the model, each time returning it to its original state.

As a result such method can be helpful for historians and archaeologists in their researches.
